

Name: _____ Date: _____

Read the following argument. Underline and label at least three logical fallacies. Then, answer the follow-up question.

Schools should not have uniforms because kids should not have to wear a specific uniform. To begin, wearing uniforms ruins individuality; all students think so. Either you give children expressive freedom, or you take it away by giving them uniforms, and thus undermine their unique and beautiful characteristics. If we allow schools to require uniforms, soon they will tell students what kind of hair style they can have, what friends they can hang out with, what beliefs they can have, and eventually they will all turn into robot children with no individuality. School boards are groups of power hungry individuals who only care about themselves, and should not make this decision. All true Americans believe in free speech – let us join together to ensure students can express not just in words but also in appearance who they are and what they believe in.

How does the use of logical fallacies weaken the writer's argument? BE SPECIFIC. (Basically, you're explaining what is wrong with the fallacies!)

Name: _____ Date: _____

Read the following argument. Underline and label at least three logical fallacies. Then, answer the follow-up question.

Schools should not have uniforms because kids should not have to wear a specific uniform. To begin, wearing uniforms ruins individuality; all students think so. Either you give children expressive freedom, or you take it away by giving them uniforms, and thus undermine their unique and beautiful characteristics. If we allow schools to require uniforms, soon they will tell students what kind of hair style they can have, what friends they can hang out with, what beliefs they can have, and eventually they will all turn into robot children with no individuality. School boards are groups of power hungry individuals who only care about themselves, and should not make this decision. All true Americans believe in free speech – let us join together to ensure students can express not just in words but also in appearance who they are and what they believe in.

How does the use of logical fallacies weaken the writer's argument? BE SPECIFIC. (Basically, you're explaining what is wrong with the fallacies!)
